

Would you like to have more knowledge and confidence to work inclusively with the children you support?

Register today for our 'Intersections Within Early Years Practice' short course at www.dingley.org.uk/training

Join the thousands of learners who have enhanced their support for children with SEND and their families through the Dingley's Promise Training programme.

This course is popular with newly qualified practitioners as well as those seeking further professional development. It can be completed online in your own time and includes a balance of theory and practical application, designed to enable you to easily implement the learning in your setting. The course will take approximately 5 hours in total to complete.

Join Dingley's Promise in transforming inclusive practice in the early years, to give every child the best start.

It is vital for us as early years providers to ensure that we aim to be fully inclusive in everything we do. We must ensure that everyone has equal access to opportunities, experiences and resources, is valued as a diverse individual, and feels welcomed, safe and supported.

This course will explore intersectionality, the overlapping and interdependent systems of discrimination and disadvantage that many face due to the intersections in their lives.

We will consider the different intersections and how intersectionality impacts the lives of children with SEND and families we are working with.

During this course you will:

- Explore the meaning of intersectionality and how people can experience intersecting forms of discrimination.
- Discover the common themes of discrimination and how these have formed over many years.
- Reflect on the early years legislative statutory and non-statutory guidance which ensures fair treatment for all families.
- Recognise how intersectionality can impact families of children with special educational needs and disabilities (SEND).
- Consider how you can adapt your practice to reduce the impacts of intersectionality and increase inclusion.

Visit www.dingley.org.uk/training to register for this course, or email training@dingley.org.uk

