Building Early Years Inclusion

Creating Inclusive Environments Training Course

Does your setting create an environment where every child with SEND can feel welcome, valued and able to thrive?

This course explores how the environment can support inclusion and respond to the diverse needs of children with SEND. You'll consider how physical spaces, outdoor environments and everyday practice can be adapted to support individual needs, while recognising that these changes can benefit every child in your setting. You'll develop practical approaches to creating environments where children and families feel a strong sense of belonging.

THIS COURSE COVERS:

- Understanding how the environment can enable inclusion and support children with SEND to thrive.
- Considering how physical and outdoor spaces can be adapted to meet different needs.
- Reflecting on your environment and practice to identify opportunities for improvement.
- Creating a sense of belonging for every child and family.
- Recognising how adaptations made for children with SEND can benefit all children.

YOU WILL EXPLORE:

✓ The foundations of an inclusive environment and what helps children feel a sense of belonging

✓ How physical spaces can be adapted to meet different sensory and individual needs

✓ The importance of outdoor play and ways to make it accessible to all children

✓ How to reflect on your environment and identify opportunities to adapt your practice

✓ How thoughtful adaptations can support inclusion and benefit every child

Join Dingley's Promise in transforming inclusive practice in the early years, to give every child the best start in life.
